Abstract

In this bachelor thesis, the Coleman-De Luccia gravitational instanton is studied. The vacuum transition rate calculation is explained in the thin-wall approximation, assuming the existence of a single scalar field with two different classically stable vacua. The importance of these gravitational instantons in the context of eternal inflation models is explained, where they would describe the quantum creation of bubble universes.